Elise Boulding Papers. 54 Boxes

Abstract

These papers concern the personal life and academic career of Dr. Elise Boulding (1920-). Elise Boulding was born in 1920 in Oslo, Norway and moved to the United States of America with her family at age three. In 1941, at the age of 21 Elise Biorn-Hansen married famed and highly respected economist, Kenneth Boulding. Together, they created a family of five children and fifteen grandchildren. Despite the extensive responsibilities that Elise Boulding had as a wife, a mother, and a grandmother, she still managed to make time for extensive academic study and peace work. Elise Boulding is noted for her active role in many peace and research oriented groups. Her involvement with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF), the International Peace Research Association (IPRA), the Consortium on Peace Research Education and Development (COPRED), and a host of other organizations has been greatly impacting and has never gone unnoticed. Furthermore, her service on the board of the United Nations University and the International Jury of the UNESCO Prize for Peace Education has helped to further international efforts toward including peace education in curricula around the globe. In 1990, Boulding was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for her work on non-violence and conflict resolution; and in 1996, Boulder's Rocky Mountain Peace Center awarded Dr. Boulding its first Peace Maker of the Year award. Elise Boulding was a former University of Colorado at Boulder professor as well as a professor emerita of Sociology at Dartmouth College. In November 1996, she left Boulder and retired to Wayland, MA, to add to her already extensive body of published books and essays, and to live closer to many of her children and grandchildren. Upon her departure, she vowed to continue her active work in peace advocacy, research and education.

Biography

Elise Boulding, sociologist, educator, peace scholar and activist was born Elise Biorn-Hansen in Oslo, Norway on July 6th, 1920 to Joseph Biorn- Hansen and Brigit Johnson. In 1923, Mr. and Mrs. Biorn-Hansen and their three year old child moved to the United States, and by 1929 were naturalized Americans.

Encouraged by her mother, who believed that Elise was destined to “do something important,”¹ she enrolled in the New Jersey College for Women (now known as Douglass College at Rutgers University). In 1940, Elise Biorn-Hansen completed her BA in English. In the spring of 1941, she became a member of the Religious Society of Friends (the Quakers) where she subsequently met her soulmate and husband to be Kenneth Ewart Boulding. The following summer, on August 31st, 1941, Elise, age 21, and Kenneth, age 31, were wed, and immediately began their lives as a couple dedicated to peacemaking at home and abroad. Soon thereafter, the couple moved to Iowa where Elise Biorn-Hansen-Boulding began her work towards a Masters degree. From 1945-1946, she worked as a research assistant for the Family Adjustments in Wartime Project at the Department of Sociology at Iowa State College. In 1947 she and husband Kenneth welcomed, John Russell, their first of five children, into the world. Despite her duties as wife and new mother, Mrs. Boulding kept-up her academic work in Sociology. In 1949, she submitted her Masters thesis entitled “Factors in Family Separation Which Influence the Course of Adjustment to War Separation and Reunion,” and subsequently received her Masters Degree in Sociology from Iowa State College.

From 1949 through to 1955, Elise Boulding devoted much of her time to motherhood. In 1949, she gave birth to Mark David, and then in 1951 came Christine Anne. Philip Daniel was born in 1953, and finally, William Frederic, the youngest of Elise and Kenneth’s children, was born in 1955. Soon thereafter, Elise once again directed her energy toward her studies and teaching career. From 1957 to 1960, she held a variety of research associate positions and immediately found herself involved in international peace work. From 1960 to 1963 Boulding worked as the editor of the International Peace Research Letter which led her to a lifetime of work developing the International Peace Research Association (IPRA) into the active and effective organization that it is today. Her work in the area of peace studies became most effective and influential when she began to merge it with her interest in futures studies. In 1961 Dr. Boulding translated, from the Dutch, Fred Polak’s classic work, Image of the Future, and used it as a tool for peace studies and social change workshops ever since.

In 1963, Elise Boulding was invited to work first as an Assistant Professor and then as an Associate Professor of Sociology at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Interspersed in these positions, Boulding went back to school for her Ph.D. and received it from Michigan University in 1969. Furthermore, from 1967 to 1970, Boulding worked diligently in the area of women’s peace efforts as the International Chair of the Women’s International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF). In the early seventies, Dr. Boulding was given a position as Professor of Sociology at CU Boulder and simultaneously worked as Associate Editor of The American Sociologist publication.

The 1970s, 1980s and 1990s were extremely successful and busy years for Dr. Boulding. She remained fully committed to her roles as mother and as wife, as well to her membership in the Quaker community. Furthermore, her dedication to peace work and teaching never faltered. Dr. Boulding's list of accomplishments runs a mile long: from her professorships at CU Boulder and Dartmouth College, to her work as Secretary General and then as President of IPRA, to her affiliation with WILPF, and the Consortium on Peace Research, Education and Development (COPRED), to her work with UNESCO and for the establishment of the Japan-based United Nations University, to her help with the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC), Boulding's energy, focus, and time was never wasted. Moreover, hardly any of her valiant and necessary work went unnoticed.

From 1973 right through to today, Boulding has been honored for her work in a variety of manners. She has won alumnae achievement awards from both Douglass College as well as from the University of Michigan. She has been granted awards for her work as a feminist scholar and leader from the National Council of Women, the National Women's Forum, and from the Sisters of Loretta. In addition, Boulding has been honored and awarded for her work as an educator and as an international peacemaker. In 1990 Dr. Boulding was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for her work on non-violence and conflict resolution. In 1995, the American Sociological Association presented Elise Boulding with a Distinguished Career Award. That very same year, COPRED honored her with an Outstanding Lifetime Service to COPRED Award, and the Boston Research Center for the 21st Century awarded her with a Global Citizens' Award. Finally, 1996, Boulder's Rocky Mountain Peace Center awarded Dr. Boulding its first Peace Maker of the Year award after which she announced her retirement and plan to move away from Colorado to live closer to her children and grandchildren in Massachusetts.

Upon her departure from Boulder in November 1996, Dr. Boulding vowed never to stop her active work in peace advocacy, research and education, and has been adding to her already extensive body of published books and essays ever since. In large part, Dr. Boulding's peace work has emerged via her volumes of publications, essays and lecture tours and has contributed to the world of peace studies in a variety of extremely valuable ways. Her books include:

Image of the Future (translated from the Dutch De Toekomst is Verleden Tyd, by Fred Polak; Oceana Press, 1961);

Handbook of International Data on Women (with Carson, Greenstein, and Nuss; New York: Halsted Press, 1976);

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Elise M. Boulding Collection includes personal and professional papers that concern Dr. Boulding's work with professional associations, international peace organizations, activist campaigns, educational reform and peace studies curricula, religious institutions, and her family. They are divided into three accessions. The first accession has a Guide that was completed by Doris Mitterling in January 1979, and edited by Sharon Kivenko in September 1999. It is divided into seven sections. Section I. International Peace Research Association (IPRA) includes membership information, newsletters, correspondences regarding affiliations with other organizations, conference and symposia working papers, campaign details, and research material about specific regions in the world where IPRA was/is at work. Section II. Consortium on Peace Research and Education (COPRED) contains membership lists, historical documentation, newsletters, correspondences, conference and symposia working papers, and funding documentation. Section III. Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF) includes papers that document WILPF's work with non governmental organizations and other international organizations in a variety of locations around the world. It also includes papers about women's global peace work, as well as efforts made by specific women, minutes kept from executive meetings, information regarding the WILPF International Headquarters as well as WILPF sections around the world. Sections IV & V Publications include publications used by Elise Boulding as references for her work as well as those written by Dr. Boulding herself. Section VI. Noes and Chapters from Elise Boulding's Books include manuscripts and edit notes from some of her books.

The Second & Third Accessions are basic preliminary inventories of documents donated by Dr. Boulding between 1979 and 1996. They include additional documentation of Boulding's work with IPRA, COPRED, WILPF as well as with UNESCO, the American and International Sociological Associations, and a host of international and American peace and education organizations. Furthermore, these two sections contain documents regarding Elise Boulding's family life, and close affiliation with the Quaker community (both the American Friends Service Committee and the Yearly Intermountain Meeting), as well as correspondence with admirers, colleagues, and students from around the world. Detailed course and lecture material from the courses that Dr. Boulding taught at both Dartmouth and at CU Boulder can be found amongst these sections as well. They also comprise an extensive collection of papers published and unpublished and presented by Elise Boulding throughout her career.

Due to the fact that the latter part of the collection was done as a very basic inventory, and that it spans close to thirty years of Dr. Boulding's extensive and intensive work, documents pertaining to specific organizations or efforts can be spread out amongst a number of boxes. However, the lists provided should be detailed enough to provide decent guidance until the entire collection is reorganized into a complete guide.

ELISE BOULDING PAPERS. 5 BOXES

ABSTRACT

Dr. Elise M. Boulding (1920-), these papers concern her personal life and academic career. Elise Boulding was born in 1920 in Oslo, Norway and moved to the United States of America with her family at age three. In 1941, the 21-year-old Elise Biorn-Hansen married the renowned and highly respected economist, Kenneth Boulding. Despite Elise Boulding's responsibilities as wife and mother she still managed to make time for extensive academic study and peace work. Elise Boulding is noted for her active role in many peace and research oriented groups. Her involvement with the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom (WILPF), the International Peace Research Association (IRPA), the Consortium on Peace Research Education and Development (COPRED), and a host of other organizations has greatly impacted and has never gone unnoticed. Furthermore, her service on the board of the United Nations University and the International Jury of the UNESCO Prize for Peace Education has helped to further international efforts toward including peace education in curricula around the globe. In 1990, Boulding was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize for her work on non-violence and conflict resolution; and in 1996, Boulder's Rocky Mountain Peace Center awarded Dr. Boulding its first Peacemaker of the Year award. Elise Boulding was a former University of Colorado at Boulder professor as well as a professor emerita of Sociology at Dartmouth College. In November 1996, she left Boulder and retired to Wayland, MA to add to her already extensive body of published books and essays, and to live closer to many of her children and grandchildren. Upon her departure, she vowed to continue her active work in peace advocacy, research, and education. This accession includes project materials, notes on conference and seminar talks, book materials, personal papers, and publication information.

Gift of: Dr. Elise Boulding, August 2000
Fourth Accession Survey by: Sharon Kivenko, November 2000

SCOPE AND CONTENT

The Elise M. Boulding Collection includes personal and professional papers that concern Dr. Boulding's work with professional associations, international peace organizations, activist campaigns, educational reform and peace studies curricula, religious institutions, and her family. They are divided into four accessions. The First Accession has a Guide that was completed by Doris Mitterling in January 1979, and edited by Sharon Kivenko in September 1999. The Second and Third Accessions have basic preliminary inventories of documents donated by Dr. Boulding between 1979 and 1996.

The Fourth Accession has a survey of documents donated by Dr. Boulding in August 2000. They include Imaging Workshop and Project Materials, papers from Elise Boulding's involvement with the Quaker community, UNESCO documents, conference and seminar talks and notes, book materials, publication information, COPRED papers, and personal papers as well. All materials are recorded as they were sent to the Archives: in original folders, files, and order. Underlined items are titles of hanging folders as they appear in writing on the folders themselves. All items under the title Untitled were left in their original order, outside any specific hanging file or category. Items loose in titled hanging files are either listed as "loose papers" or the hanging file itself is numbered as a regular file. In such cases, the words "hanging file" are marked in brackets. Finally, all title discrepancies for published materials or for speech or essay titles can be attributed to the very basic nature of the inventory, as well as to Dr. Boulding's editing process. For example, name differences can be found amongst the files of Dr. Boulding's most recent publication. In some cases, the work appears as "The Culture of Peace," and in others, it appears as "Cultures of Peace."
